Dibakar Subodh Other Bollywood.Q: How to treat this question about proof of wrong guesses for Hexacode? Let's say I have the task to write all hexacode with length less than or equal to the length of the provided string. For example, I need to provide 2 inputs: Hexadecimal-code and string. The program should tell me for each character of the provided string if it is "Hex-adcem" or "wrong-guess" where "wrong-guess" means that the provided character is not a part of the given hexadecimal-code. Example inputs: INPUT : HEXACODE : 1234AB567CD789EFGO STRING : 1234AB567 OUTPUT: for "HEX-adcem", 1234AB567 -> 1 for "wrong-guess", 1234AB567 -> 0 This is an interview-question. I am curious which part of the problem I can use as a basis for my own solution? A:  $2^{(4*\text{len}(\text{input}))}$  will give you all possibilities, and it's a time-lower bound for anything except the most simple pseudoprime tests. You'd better use  $\text{Len}(\text{input})  \text{len}(\text{input})$  or  $\text{Len}(\text{input})  \text{len}(\text{input}) + 1$ , better still  $\text{Len}(\text{input})  \text{Len}(\text{input})$  for a better upper bound. Note that if length is less than  $2^4$ , it's trivially true that no bad guesses exist. (You can find such an example by enumerating all possibilities and checking for negatives or not conforming to the length property.) Your "wrong-guess" criterion is ill-defined, but if
